Jefferson Economic Council names McCasky CEO

Denver Business Journal

Date: Wednesday, January 19, 2011, 3:47pm MST

The Jefferson Economic Council has named J. Kevin McCasky as its next president and CEO, effective in mid February.

McCasky's appointment was approved Tuesday by the nonprofit economic development group's board.

McCasky has been a Jefferson County commissioner since 2005 and formerly was county assessor.

"I am excited by the opportunity of having Kevin assume the leadership of JEC," Michael R. McGinnis, a partner with Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck LLP and chair of the council's search committee, said in a statement. "He has served on our board for six years and immersed himself in the details of promoting our economy. Kevin emerged through the search and interview process as the one candidate with the most extensive knowledge of Jefferson County and its economic potential."
